

MED NEWS

HEADLINES FROM THE MEDITERRANEAN

Politics

The Crisis in Bosnia and Herzegovina (Visegrad/ Insight)

The news that the European military force in Sarajevo, EUFOR Althea, will be receiving reinforcements has been positively received in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Read more here.

French election: Macron and Le Pen clash in TV presidential debate (BBC News)

The two candidates for the French presidency have gone head to head in their only televised debate, ahead of Sunday's second-round run-off vote. Read more here.

The Region under New Rise of Nationalism (Albanian Daily News)

The political crisis in Montenegro is ongoing. Read more here.

Italy's gas deal with Algeria 'slap in the face to Spain' (ANSAMED)

The visit on Monday to Algiers by Italian prime minister Mario Draghi was a slap in the face to Spain after its change in position on the issue of Western Sahara," the Algerian news site Dernieres Info d'Algeria (DIA) reported in an explicit reference to Spain's support for Moroccan against the independence movement of the former Spanish desert colony, which is instead supported by Algeria. Read more here.

Environment

Tunisia Says Countries Offer Help to Tackle Impact of Fuel Ship's Sinking (voanews)

Some countries have offered to help Tunisia prevent damage to the environment after a merchant ship carrying up to one thousand tons of oil sank off the coast of Gabes, the Tunisian defense ministry said on Sunday. Read more here.

How two million years of shifting climates shaped our evolution (Mail Online)

The distribution of ancient humans over the past two million years was heavily influenced by the Earth's climate, a new study has revealed. Read more here.

Eyeing green vote, Macron vows to exit oil, coal and gas (Euronews)

MARSEILLE, France – President Emmanuel Macron promised on Saturday to make France the “first great nation” to stop using oil, coal and gas as energy sources, in a pitch to young and green voters he fears could abstain in next week’s election runoff. Read more here.

Europe turns to Middle East, Mediterranean to reduce its dependence on Russian gas (The Print)

As the war in Ukraine rages on, leaders of European countries, notably Germany, have come to realize that they made a serious mistake by becoming so dependent on Russian energy. Read more here.

Culture & Archeology

Archeological site along Nile opens a window on the Nubian civilization (The Jerusalem Post)

Circular mounds of rocks dot the desert landscape at the archaeological site of Tombos in northern Sudan. They reveal tumuli – the underground burial tombs used at least as far back as 2500 B.C. by ancient inhabitants who called this region Kush or Nubia. Read more here.

Greece Guide: You'll Need This Many Days To See All Of Meteora (The Travel)

Meteora is dramatic both in its landscape and in its incredible history, and this is how long you'll need to see this ancient Greek land. Read more here.

Forensic Architecture Finds Israeli Occupation Is Destroying Major Palestinian Archeological Site (HYPERALLERGIC)

Forensic Architecture (FA), a London-based research agency that investigates human rights violations through environmental modeling and analysis, has published the findings of its first project pertaining to archeology. Read more here.

Islamic Civilizations Museum fascinates people (Hürriyet Daily News)

The Museum of Islamic Civilizations, which opened last week in the Büyük Çamlıca Mosque Complex, draws great interest from visitors with its exceptional artworks that shed light on the development of Islamic art. Read more here.

Caricature of the Week

You can find the original link
End of Med News